Cardamom is a spice native to Sri Lanka. It is called the "Seeds of Paradise" the pods can be used whole or the husks can be removed and the seeds released. They have a very aromatic taste. They come in green and white varieties. Cardamom is the only spice that can be used with sweet and savory dishes or to flavor rice.

Madola Ceylon Cloves

In the culinary arts, cloves are a spice made from the flower buds of an evergreen tree called the clove tree. Clove flower buds are harvested, unopened, and then dried. Cloves have a very strong, pungent flavor and aroma. They can be used whole or ground.

Sri Lankan cloves used whole for their flavor and aroma in meat or rice dishes.

Madola Ceylon Nutmeg

Nutmeg (also known as pala in Indonesia) is one of the two spices - the other being mace - derived from several species of tree in the genus Myristica. The most important commercial species is Myristica fragrans, an evergreen tree indigenous to the Banda Islands in the Moluccas (or Spice Islands) of Indonesia. Sri Lankan Nutmeg is the dried seed of an evergreen tree. This spice is used in making curry powder and some sweet dishes and cakes.

Madola Ceylon Mace

Mace comes from Nutmeg. The lacy aril is removed by hand from the outer shell of the Nutmeg and then dried, becoming yellowish-brown mace. It is used in cakes, puddings, custards, desserts, sauces, soups, poultry and fish.

Madola Ceylon Vanilla Pods (Vanilla Fragrans)

Vanilla fragrans is important source of natural vanilla. It is used as a flavor ingredient in the confectionary and also in perfume and pharmaceutical industry. Vanilla is an economically important crop as it is the source of natural vanillin. It is believed that vanilla is indigenous to north eastern Mexico. It is ancient Totonaco Indians of Mexico who were the first keepers of the secrets of vanilla. When they were defeated by the Aztecs they were demanded to relinquish their exotic fruit, vanilla pods.
